

Hints & Tips – Sharing DNA Results at Ancestry

This 'Hint and Tips' document explains how to share your DNA results at Ancestry.

Go to the Ancestry DNA homepage for the kit you want to share with someone else.

Click on Settings in top right corner (see green circle).

Scroll down to Privacy section and Sharing Preferences. Click on 'Change'.

You will then get the option to 'Add a person'.

The following will appear – you may also have an option of 'Manager' in the list.

Type in the email address or Ancestry username of the person you would like to share your results with. It is advisable to choose 'Viewer' unless you are happy for them to add notes and coloured dots to your matches ('Collaborator'). Then click 'Send Invitation'.

If you want to make someone the manager of the kit (noting this puts them in charge of the kit and allows them to download raw DNA, delete the kit, etc.), choose the 'Manager' option. You will want to ask someone to do this on their account if you want to manage their kit through your account (e.g. a relative has tested for you and they do not want to manage their own kit).

If at any time you want to remove someone's ability to view your results, follow the same process and you will see their name in a list under 'Sharing Preferences' when you click on 'Change'. You can then remove their rights by clicking the 'x'.
